

Why become a Break Foster Carer?

What does Break offer its Foster Carers?

- Regular professional supervision from a qualified social worker
- Social workers with low caseloads who are able to provide high levels of support
- 24/7 out-of-hours support and on-call service
- Market leading allowances in recognition of their knowledge, skill and experience
- A straightforward and simple payments system
- Single placements
- Regular short breaks
- Young people regularly go to an identified short breaks foster carer
- Therapeutic group consultation from a qualified therapist once a fortnight
- Break has a well established Learning and Development team and foster carers will be offered excellent training, including the Children's Workforce Development Council Level 3 Diploma. To find out more, see our Foster Carer Learning and Development Programme.

How does Break choose its foster carers?

Young people come from diverse backgrounds, so we welcome applications from potential foster carers with a range of life experiences.

As a foster carer, you will need:

- A good understanding of your own experiences and an ability to reflect on these
- Flexibility and time
- Commitment and the resilience to work through difficulties
- An ability to understand the issues affecting vulnerable young people
- To be open to taking on new ideas and to engage with the support offered
- Some experience of working with or living with young people
- An understanding of children and young people's developmental needs and behaviours
- Good communication skills to enable you to build a meaningful relationship with a young person and work well with a team of fellow professionals
- A commitment to attend regular therapeutic support groups and training offered by Break for its carers
